YALE'S GRIT AGAIN IN EVIDENCE AT NEW LONDON

HARVARD FRESHIES SCORE A VICTORY OVER YALE BOAT

Old Eli Evens Up by Winning Four-Oared Race.

NEW LONDON, June 28 .- While Harvard won the freshman eight race, the honors today as well as yesterday go to the sons of Eli.

The freshman eight race was won after a grueling contest, in which the leaders succeeded only by the most de-termined grit in stalling off a desperate spurt in the last half mile by the New Haven men, winning the race by a scant

In the four-oared varsity race, it was a procession. Yale winning as she pleased by something like sixteen lengths. The distance was so great that it was hard to estimate with any degree of exactness.

The freshman race was all that could be desired. Harvard took the lead at the start, and steadily increased it until she was two and a half lengths ahead at the mile-and-a-half stake. Then the men from Yale got down to their knitting, and with beautiful, machine-like strokes sent their boat spinning through the water at a rate which rapidly decreased the open space between them and the leaders.

There was plenty of muscle and courage, however, in the Harvard boat, and the youngsters responded nobly, holding ough of their lead to take the race. It was as close a finish as one cares see, and only four seconds between the winning and losing time.

It was altogether different, however, in the four-oared varsity race, which followed immediately. Here Yale's su-periority was quickly shown. The time tells the story of the race-12:33 for Yale and 13:15 for Harvard. Had the Yale crew been pushed it would have very materially reduced these figures.

Yale Beats Harvard In Varsity Eights

NEW LONDON, June 28 .- Yale wo another great victory in the intercolle-giate varsity eight-oared race yesterday by a few inches less than a boat length. She won it in the last six strokes of perhaps as grueling a contest as Yale and Harvard have ever rowed.

Throughout the distance just a shade separated the two crews over the en-tire four miles. As the two neared the finish line Yale had gained a slight ad-yantage, which Harvard was fighting like death to overcome. When they appeared so close that the fight was hope-less Harvard's steam seemed to be exhausted, and Yale with a superhuman effort shot her shell over the line with six gigantic strokes that each meant a yard or more of gain, until she just failed to clear her rudder post of Harvard's bow as the judges' flag fell to decide the finish. Harvard's shell crossed the line three seconds behind Yale's bow, and as she crossed two of her men collapsed, exhausted by the terrific ef-

Boats Close All the Way.

Over the four-mile-course, they were sent away at 7:11 o'clock in the evening, there was never half a boat length between the two shells, except at the finish line. Most of the time the crews were rowing within two a low stroke, well pulled, though there was a seesawing of the two bows as first one and then the other caught the water. It was ding-dong from gun to the slightest advantage approaching the line. Which won they did not know for ten minutes—not, in fact, until Harvard returned across the river to her boathouse. Then, as silence fell where before there had been excited inquiry, they knew Yale had won, and the big Blue contingent sent up a cheer that was the wilder for its long restraint. As it reverberated from the old Connecticut hills it awoke memories of the long line of victories for the sons of Ell.

They were talking of the wonderful spectacle presented by Cornell and Columbia. They are talking of the wondertul repetition of the spectacle by Yale's and Harvard's crews. As Cornell and Columbia fought, so did Yale and Harvard. The crews were, indeed, even closer most of the way, and the lead changed more often, though not so late in the race. Where a quarter length separated the boats at Poughkeepsie it was a question of feet here.

rd. end of the third inning led their Senatical torial rivals by 13 to 2.

Desiring to get to their homes before midnight, Griff's men let up in their stick work and tallied only two more runs in the remaining five stanzas, and a decided failing off in field display, principally through carelessness, gave the visitors opportunities for more marks, so that the final verdict was 15 to 7.

Case Patten, eminent southpaw from Westport, this State, and generally a tough proposition for the resident Americans. was trounced in approved fashion, being rapped for twenty hits, sixteen coming in the first three rounds. At the first three rounds. However, two of those drives were for the grand tour, Chase giving the ball a bump through and past Nill in the seventh, and Conroy pasting a long drive to right in the eighth. Wid might have been halted at third had 1 Captain Ganley, of the visitors, been equipped with a wireless telegraphic outoff, but the Senatorial commander wasn't, and made the mistake of returning the sphere toward second instead of to the plate.

Chesbro Goes Limit.

Keeler and Chase had great times boosting their batting averages. Wee boosting their batting averages. Wee out and the score 2 to 1 in favor of Willie put the sphere out of the reach of the felders on his first four trips to the plate, and Handsome Hal got raps his first three times up, made Delahanty furuble in his fourth shot, and then wound up the day by clouting for his first four-bagger of the year. Keeler made his four hits inside of as many innings—a noteworthy exploit—while Chase, in addition to flushing four safe-Chase, in addition to flushing four safeties, crossed the plate four times.

The third produced seven tallies for the Highlanders, made on eight hits, cne walk, and a fumble by Clymer, who started in left for Washington, though the Philadelphia National League club asserts it has not waived claim to him. After the third Nill took Clymer's place. Manager Cantillon and Pitcher Hughes, of the Washingtons, were ejected from the field for criticising Umpire Hurst. Lanky Tom called Tim a fine fat-head as he was heading for the dressing room.
